

Teachers College provides both informal and formal grievance and dispute resolution procedures.

Informal Procedures. The College believes that most individuals with concerns, misunderstandings and disputes are more likely to come forward if informal procedures are available. In the interests of resolving such matters promptly and efficiently, the College provides numerous options to obtain information and raise concerns about other members of the TC community (or visitors) in an informal manner. The College encourages individuals to begin discussions and resolutions with people in their departments, programs, and units, if applicable and comfortable.

In General:

- Students with concerns or problems are encouraged to go first to the faculty member, and if the concern is not resolved, contact their program coordinator or departmental chair. If the concern or problem is not resolved at the program or departmental level, students may contact the Vice Provost for Student Affairs, Tom Rock, at (212) 678-3083 or tpr4@tc.columbia.edu.
- Faculty and instructional staff with concerns or problems that have not been resolved at the program or departmental level may contact Marie Miville, Vice Dean for Faculty Affairs, miville@tc.columbia.edu.
- Professional and other non-union staff with concerns or problems that have not been resolved through their supervisors or within their departments may contact Human Resources at (212) 678-3175 or hr@tc.columbia.edu, and inform them of the concern in writing. If not satisfied with the Human Resources resolution, the staff member may submit a written description of the problem to the appropriate Vice President and request a resolution. If the problem is still not resolved or continues, professional staff members may submit a written description of the problem to the President. see: Informal Grievance Procedure policy 307 in the Policy Library tc.columbia.edu/policylibrary.
- Union members with concerns or problems that have not been resolved by their steward, supervisor, or within their departments may contact Human Resources at (212) 678-3175 or hr@tc.columbia.edu. The College Ombuds is available as well.
